

I am extremely happy that most solicitors have stopped calling my home - often during the dinner hour. My husband and I both work very long days and the evening hours should be ours and not be caught up in long, aggressive conversations with people selling their products or soliciting for funds.